

Dear FCC Commissioners & Staff:

I hope you will do everything in your power to open the broadband market to independent Internet Service Providers, rather than restricting their access to the market.

I currently enjoy the services of a superb ISP, IgLou, whose staff is polite, knowledgeable and responsive. My alternative if IgLou were removed from this market would be the local Bell subsidiary. I've dealt with them before. On a good day they're unhelpful. More often they're rude and ignorant.

I don't need that, nor does any other internet user. Competition is what makes our economy work for all of us. Please don't stifle it.

Sincerely,

Stephen Rindsberg
